Civil Defense Headquarters Preparing For Emergency

Steffel, Bay St. Louis Civil Defense Director, said this week emergency operation center at Webb School is almost ready for occupancy. The lower level of the building, he added, is being prepared for operations during emergencies.

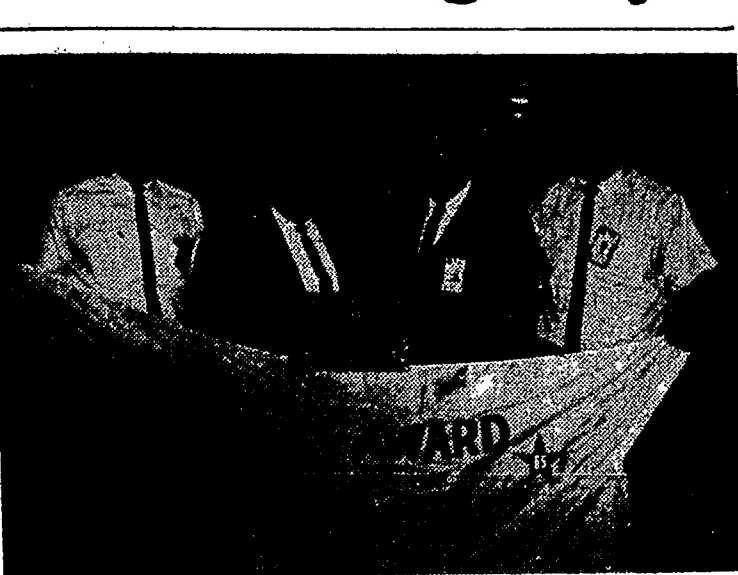

Steffel, the director stated, has completed checking all citizens' radios and net work to be in emergency and also now in process of determining the size of rosters of all men and women.

Steffel and Jim Kirsch, National Aeronautics and Space Administration, have recently joined the group and have been assigned to the communications section. Both men added, are ham radio operators and they are now in the process of assembling and installing an emergency radio system.

Steffel is reminding all C. D. members that only new identification cards will be acceptable in any emergency.

He added, must be completely filled out on both sides, attached and finger prints on at the sheriff's office.

Each year a number of men who have helped with rescue or outside work were unable to do so as they had to stay in the city in this situation in the future. He is asking any women, from 18 years of age, interested in doing volunteer work at the center during emergencies, such as answering phones, to call Mrs. L. H. Raymond, City Hall, 487-9091 and their names will be put in the roster.

AIR FORCE PLACES NEW EMPHASIS ON PRIOR SERVICE PROGRAM

Sgt. Paul Jenkins, Information NC for Air Force Recruiting, said today that the Air Force has placed new emphasis on the Air Force prior service program.

Sgt. Jenkins stated that this program has now become one of the special programs for this year's recruiting objectives as part of the increased quota in voluntary enlistments.

In addition to the many vacancies which now allow prior service men and women to return to active duty in their former job at the same rank held at discharge, there are now opportunities for Technical School assignments for former service personnel.

Sgt. Jenkins said that the program for prior service has been opened to nearly all career fields and he urged all interested former service people to inquire at one of the Air Force Recruiting offices in Jackson, Meridian, Greenville, Natchez, Hattiesburg and Gulfport. Interested applicants in other Mississippi towns can locate their Air Force Recruiter by inquiring at their local post office or Selective Service office. The Air Force Recruiting office in Jackson is in room 308B of the main post office building.

PEARLINGTON AND AREA TO GET NATURAL GAS

Some 300 residents and commercial establishments in Pearlington and adjoining area will soon have natural gas service because of a project by United Gas Corp. for construction of gas mains and distribution facilities.

Construction is already underway on the project and completion of this phase is expected in October. Construction was awarded to Hyde Construction Corp. of Jackson.

Included in the project will be natural gas service for the Oak Harbor and Belle Isle Subdivisions.

United Gas Pipe Line will furnish natural gas for the project through the Ansley Field Lateral line purchased from the Tarpon Gas Corp. The line consists of 16.8 miles of five and one half and six inch pipe.

John A. Mills, United Gas manager for the Mississippi Coast district, said, "Because of growth potential of Pearlington and vicinity, it is anticipated that within five years United will be serving 1,000 customers in the area."

He went on to predict a bright future for the general area because of its location near the National Aeronautics and Space Agency's Mississippi Test Operations Site in Hancock County.

Another contributing factor in the development of the area is a port and harbor program that is planned on the Pearl River. A report has already been prepared by Michael Baker, Jr., consulting engineer in Jackson, showing this project to be feasible.

Mills praised H. G. Dean, supervisor of Beat 1, and the members of the Hancock County Board of Supervisors for their enthusiasm and cooperation in supporting this project. He also pointed out that the development of Oak Harbor Subdivision by C. H. Hill and his associates helped make this expansion project economically feasible. He said prompt approval by the Mississippi Public Service Commission made it possible for the service to be available at an early date.

Mills stated that all residents in the area to be served by the initial facilities will be contacted very soon and urged to sign up promptly for natural gas service in order to assure that natural gas service will be available to them at the time construction is completed.

Mills said that since most of the homes in this area are equipped for butane gas, it will be necessary for prospective customers to have their house piping checked for proper size. At the time natural gas service is made available to each particular customer, arrangements will be made by United Gas to convert existing gas appliances for natural gas service, Mills added.

Customer service for Pearlington will be handled out of the Gulfport office by radio equipped service trucks.

City Ordinances Due Complete Overhaul

GAINESVILLE, Miss., August 24 — Savings during 1965 of $45,000 and potential savings to U. S. Taxpayers of millions of dollars will be realized by resourcefulness of John D. Hood of Piquette, Miss., a traffic specialist for General Electric Co. at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Mississippi Test Facility. Hood developed his cost improvement suggestion for using commercial bills of lading on shipments entitled to lower government rates into new procedures that can save his department and every fully-reimbursed government contractor seven percent on employee household goods shipments. His is top individual cost improvement idea within GE's Mississippi Test Support Operation this year. Hood, a native of Greeley, Colo., has been with the Company for 13 years, has three children and is active in community affairs.

NASA News..

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — The first flight S-IVB stage delivered to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration is scheduled to begin the trip from Douglas Aircraft Co.'s Sacramento Test Center to the NASA-Kennedy Space Center Friday aboard a commercial barge.

The stage — second stage for the Saturn IB 201 launch vehicle — was delivered to NASA at ceremonies Tuesday at the Douglas test center.

It will be carried down the Sacramento River aboard a barge to Richmond, Calif., where it will be transferred to the ocean freighter "Steel Executive" for a voyage through the Panama Canal to Cape Kennedy, Fla.

The "Steel Executive," operated by the Space Marine Lines, is expected to arrive at the Cape about Sept. 18.

In a brief ceremony at the Douglas test center Tuesday, California Governor Edmund G. Brown presented the huge S-IVB to Edmund F. O'Connor, director of the NASA-Marshall Space Flight Center's Industrial Operations, MSFC, at Huntsville, Ala., directed the Saturn program.

Gov. Brown acted for Donald Douglas, Jr., Douglas Aircraft Co. president, who asked the governor to make the formal delivery in behalf of Douglas employees who built the new stage.

The S-IVB is a larger, more powerful follow-on to the Douglas-built S-IV, upper stage of the Saturn I launch vehicle. The S-IV scored a perfect success record in a six-flight test program which ended a month ago.

The new rocket will fly as second stage atop a Chrysler-built first stage. The Saturn IB has a 35,000 pound payload capability — 60 percent more than that of Saturn I. The first launching is set for early next year.

The Saturn IB will give the U. S. the capability for three-man space flights, in earth-orbiting missions of the Apollo spacecraft expected in 1967. It will also be used for other NASA space missions.

Later models of the S-IVB will serve as third stage of the Saturn V launch vehicle for the Apollo manned flights to the moon.

The S-IVB is a hydrogen-fueled vehicle powered by a 300,000 pound thrust Rocketdyne engine. The stage, 58 feet long and 21 1/2 feet in diameter, formed the backbone of the delivery system.

A complete overhaul of Bay St. Louis City ordinances will go into effect October 1, following adoption of a resolution last Monday by the city council approving the re-codification.

The city last December employed Municipal Code Corp., of Tallahassee, Fla., to undertake the task of reviewing the city's code, eliminating out-dated laws, revising old ones and adding new ones.

General areas receiving the major revisions include ordinances pertaining to various building, electrical and plumbing codes, traffic regulations and zoning laws.

Also included in the revisions is an ordinance calling for the election of the two commissioners by post rather than at-large as in the past. Previously the city council made the appointment of posts to the two commissioners following the election.

Commissioner J. Cyril Glover said this is the first overhaul of the city's ordinances which were last recodified May 3, 1932, when Charles Traub Sr. served as Mayor and Sylvan Ladner Sr., as commissioner and secretary.

COMMENDED FOR SPECIAL SERVICE TO AIR FORCE

S M Sgt. Edwin W. Cobb was recently commended by Major General J. E. Roberts, commander of Eglin Air Force Base, Florida in a letter to Cobb's commanding officer Major James Codron, Jr.

Cobb, serving with the 609th Radar Squadron, Eufaula A. Base, was cited for contributing some vital prompt service to the Air Force in an emergency.

The letter stated a short time before the landing of the Gemini Mission, June 3 a fault had occurred in the transmitter at the Eglin tracking station which reduced the radar to half power.

The necessary replacement part was located at the Eufaula Base and SM Sgt. Cobb checked, packaged and personally took it to Eufaula Civil Airport and insured safe loading on the Eglin aircraft.

As a result of the spare being immediately available, the radar was fully operational within four hours after the fault was discovered.

MSgt. Cobb, Mrs. Cobb, the former Audrey Bourgeois, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ducre Bourgeois, Waveland, and children, who recently returned from a tour of duty in Japan, are now residing in Eufaula.

MOSQUITO PROBLEM AT LOW LEVEL

The mosquito problem along the Gulf Coast from Hancock County to Jackson County carried by a low level and fairly stable, according to Chris Elmore, director of the Gulf Coast Mosquito Control Commission.

The director said Tuesday, before leaving for New Orleans where he was to attend an annual meeting of the Louisiana Mosquito Control Association Friday, that commission employees were carrying out routine inspection work, making mosquito counts and keeping track of problem areas.

With the mosquito count down somewhat the inspectors now are able to turn more of their attention on locating and treating where necessary new breeding areas.

Most of the mosquito nuisance at this time is coming from two small problem areas and cannot be connected with any widespread salt-marsh breeding problem, Elmore noted.

TOUR MTF

Jaycette Members, Mesdames Jack Campbell, Bert Stieff, John Koenen, Louis Prendergast and James Heverling made a tour of the Mississippi Test Facility site last Monday.

South Mississippi is now making strong inroads into the previously West Coast dominated industry. Manufacturers and consumers alike are rapidly realizing the potential of Southern Pine in the plywood industry as a result of its fast growing, high quality wood that replenishes Mississippi stands in one-third to one-half the time required for western stands to grow the same volume of wood.

The fact that Mississippi timber is especially suited for plywood production is indicated by the plants already located in Mississippi and other West Coast plants that are considering moving or expanding to our area.

HOBBIES

Jim Harris shown above says that most everyone has some kind of a hobby. His is an interesting and informative one. Jim collects arrowheads in the state of Georgia. He also has some tomahawks and spear points found around Indian mounds and along roads under construction. The best time to find arrow heads is after hard rains when gravel and stones are washed clean. Jim sometimes walks five miles after work looking for the heads to add to his already valuable collection.

Definition of arrowheads: Apex of a slender Missile implement, especially when of material different from the shaft.

Chert and other hard stones were used by the Indians for making arrowheads and were attached to shafts, made of hard woods, and tied with vines, raw hide rope made from certain grasses, and fired by a bow. Indians were skillful with the bow and arrow for food. In catching fish some were speared by those using bows and arrows.

Harris also has a few tomahawks and spear points found around Indian mounds in his section of the country. Tomahawk heads and spear points were also made of stone and attached to the shaft by thongs, etc. It is said that the Indians heated the stone and shaped it by dropping cold water on it. Other explanations claim that the arrowheads were shaped by chiseling them with another stone.

Stone arrowheads are still made by some primitive people. In the collection are real small arrowheads used for shooting, birds, rabbits and other small game while larger ones were used to kill larger game. Jim has all sizes of them.
